What We've Been up to!

Beyond the Classroom Blog Series

Beyond the Classroom is a storytelling series from the U.S. Forest and Wood Products Inclusion Council that shares firsthand testimonials from students & individuals involved in National Scale Organizations Connecting Youth & Forestry and how those experiences shaped their paths in forestry.

Beyond the Classroom Part #5 - NC State's High School Summer Research Program

In Part 5, we highlight how NC State's High School Summer Research Program introduces students to forestry through hands-on research, mentorship, and real-world experiences. The program gives students an opportunity to explore forestry and natural resources while building skills, connections, and confidence as they consider future career pathways.

Community Colleges & Rapid Credentials Learning Lab

How can community colleges help build the forest workforce of the future?

The Inclusion Council's upcoming Learning Lab will explore how community colleges are creating faster, more flexible pathways into careers across the forest and wood products sector.

The session will highlight innovative approaches to workforce development, including flexible credentials, hands-on learning, employer connections, and regional partnerships that help prepare people for opportunities across both traditional and emerging areas of the sector.
